KEMP STREET PARTNERS

CONTEMPORARY NEUROSCIENCE PLUS YEARS OF BUSINESS, CONSULTING AND COACHING EXPERIENCE

Liane is an accredited coach. She founded Kemp Street Partners to utilise her skills and passion for coaching to help individuals embrace and manage the challenges around them to be the best that they can be. She combines the latest research with many years of business leadership experience, to help clients create a learning agenda that aligns with their unique learning styles, fits into their busy daily schedules and brings lasting results. Then she supports them to move forward seamlessly as they adopt new approaches and experiment with new behaviours.

In addition to her coaching and team facilitation work, Liane is a highly experienced instructional designer. Workshops and programs developed for clients span senior leader development, using coaching style conversations to increase leadership effectiveness, interpersonal and team effectiveness etc. In addition, she designed and runs a Women in Leadership program, including topics such as resilience and self-compassion, building confidence and high impact influencing.

Her clients are located across the globe and include consultants, senior and C-suite executives from industries as diverse as education, telecoms, heavy industry, consumer goods, biotech, not-for-profit, government agencies, financial and professional services. She is largely agnostic as to industry or function as her view is that “the key to the door of growth and lasting behavioural change is a restlessness with the status quo”.

Liane’s coaching work goes beyond performance and career-based coaching to help executives understand the origins of life patterns that may be hindering behavioural change. She works with leaders, who are bombarded with the relentless demands of today’s business environment, to find sustainable strategies to create time and space for reflection and renewal, and offers them a safe place in which to reflect, and test ideas.

Prior to founding Kemp Street Partners, Liane was the Partner who built and then led the professional development function for global executive search firm Spencer Stuart for more than eleven years (six on the worldwide management team, five based in the USA). Before moving into professional services, she had a line management background, having managed the Nutritional Products Division of what is now known as Fonterra, including leading the day-to-day operations of a US-based joint venture. She started her career in the oil and gas industry in a corporate planning and technical advisory capacity, before becoming the planning manager for a venture capital company.

Liane has a Bachelor of Science in Mathematics. She gained her coaching accreditation from Columbia University and has served as the Academic Chair, and subsequently Conference Chair for the International Columbia Coaching Conference. She is a member of the International Coach Federation and is accredited in a number of psychometric tools, including the Leadership Circle Profile (LCP), Emotional and Social Competency Inventory (ESCI) and the Neethling Brain Instrument (NBI). She has a particular passion and interest in leaders and leadership and has written and presented on this topic. Her research, on how reciprocal peer coaching enables sustained leader development, was published in the Philosophy of Coaching Journal.
